Cheap fishing gear

Photo: Courtesy of Paramount For Sport many turn from nostalgia for a simpler time, starting fishing really isn't that easy. There are hundreds (if not thousands) of sticks and bait on the market, each claiming to be the only step between you and your next catch. How do you avoid being mired in confusion about which rods and accessories are right for you? The good news is that you can immediately narrow this wide range by focusing on two types of fishing that all five experts we spoke to told us were best for less than a professional fisherman: pan and bass fishing. (They are the best, we learned, because they are both the easiest for beginners, and also the only two types of fishing available in all non-consensual 48 states.) But even at that point, finding the equipment you need to fairly fish pan and bass without overconsuse is still a daunting prospect for the newcomer. To eliminate some of this stress, we asked our experts - who range from baits and shop owners, to avid hobbyists, to the president of the International Federation of Black Bass Anglers - for their advice on the best bars for beginners, baits and hooks for those on a budget, all of which, they promise, will guarantee you'll get something out of the water in the first few attempts. (Just be sure to hold it horizontally for the winning photo, they say, because holding the fish vertically can injure them before returning them to the water.) Just before we begin, it is a further note that the coming autumn months for pan and bass fishing are the holy grail, according to Alex S. Hedaya, who has hunted both for more than a decade. In general, summer is so hot that fish don't really bite as much. But when it cools in autumn, they bite so much that they gain weight for the winter, you can catch the same fish four times. Shakespeare Micro Series Spinning Combo, 4'6" The easiest place to start is panfishing, says Ross Gordon, CEO of modern fishing brand Catch Co, because they are in every body of water, they are relatively small and super easy to catch, because their population is very high wherever they are. Since panfish are lighter, experts recommend using lighter rods. (In general, the lighter the fish, the lighter your rod should be, so you can feel it when it nibbles.) The main thing you want with panfishing is easy action, says John DeCuffa of the Bronx's Jack's Bait and Tackle, because it gives you the sensitivity to feel the bite (in the words of Arthur Bronson, president of the International Federation of Black Bass Anglers.) He recommended this affordable, ultra-lightweight turning stick for the Shakespeare fishing brand as a great departure for Gordon, Hedaya and Bronson. This is because on top of that is a lightweight bar of suitable length for panfishing, it is also a combined bar, which means that it comes with a roll and a line that is already attached. $25 at Dick's Sporting Goods Bassett's Cricket Ranch Live Waxworms, 500 ct. panfishing, when it comes to baiting and tackling (two words that experts have told us are mostly interchangeable) there are two routes to go down: live or artificial. For most people trying panfish, there are two choices of approach, live bait or artificial bait, says Gordon, who thinks live bait is slightly better at catching panfish. The easiest way to catch panfish is to use a wax bug, put it on a hook, throw it away, wait for the bobber to come down and start creeping in, he says. This waxworm package has a Live Guarantee to ship and can be delivered to your home or local post office. Trout magnet Panfish Magnet Kit While generally saying live bait will get a little more bite, Gordon admits that it's a compromise - they don't last that long, and people tend to be snide around them. If you do not like the idea of putting live worms on the hook (we do not blame you) our experts told us that luckily you can easily catch fish with artificial bait. Fish will feed on the basis of a variety of their senses, from sight to smell to taste, and have a line down the side of the body that can detect movements in the water. They are reactive predators, not so intelligent. All this to say, Gordon says, is that if they feed and there is artificial bait in the water, they will come and check. They may not hold him for that long, but they'll hold him long enough for you to start recovering. Ross' favorite artificial panfishing kit is called, appropriately, a PanFish magnet. I recommend it to people who fish for the first time, because it's an all-in-one kit, he says. Hedaya is also a fan of such kits, because they come in a number of colors, which he and magazine editor (and longtime fisherman) Matt Hranek tell us is a good thing, because if you don't get bites, sometimes changing the color of your bait is just a thing to get a different reaction. Eagle Claw Snap On Floats, 1 When it comes to bobbers (who sit on the water and fall below when the fish pulls it, telling you when to start recovering) our expectations universally say that almost all simple, round bobs will work just fine. However, Gordon pointed out that he doesn't recommend Flip Bobbers', where your line runs through bobber, beginners, because they increase the risk of tangles. These simpler bobbers were recommended to us by Hedaya. (Keep caution: there are no bobbers in the following section, as it is not common to use it in bass fishing.) $2 at Dick's Sporting Goods Shakespeare Ugly Stik GX2 Custom Spinning Combo There are several reasons you'll want to equate to bass fishing at some point, our experts say. You want to catch bigger fish, one of the reasons Gordon mentioned it, but adds that, there's an element of sporty spirit in bass fishing, too, it's a little different. Since you rely on the feel of the rod rather than the bobber, more skill is involved. Put yourself in the best position to deal with Puzzle without breaking the bank, our experts all said that you will want to buy another combined stick with a spinning roll, although this time the one that is a little lighter, because the bass are bigger and you do not need as a light stick to feel them. The most important thing for beginners, Bronson says, is not to get a specialized bass bar, but to get one that is durable and will work for all circumstances, and is economical. This stronger rod was recommended by three experts who guarantee the quality of the brand at an affordable price. They also like it because, at 6' 6", it's longer than a panfishing rod, which is better for bass fishing, as it gives you the most reach, control and flexibility. It's getting shorter and you're going to work more. And Hedaya says it's a model he keeps in his car to teach his friends, and it never let him down. $60 at Dick's Sporting Goods Shimano Sienna Spinning Combo Mealk told us he would also recommend an entry-level bass fishing rod like this one from Shiman (of which Gordon is also a fan) for the simple reason that they produce rods all the way to the firmest level. As you get better at it, he says, you can graduate within the brand portfolio to better versions of what you started with. $60 at Dick's Sporting Goods Nightcrawlers, 12 ct. It's rarer, but if you prefer, Gordon says, You can still fish bass with live bait. But if you do, he and Hedaya said you'll want to upgrade to night owls that are, essentially, bigger worms for larger fish - and are the most popular live fishing bait at all. This pack of worms sends overnight from Petco, with 12 to the lim. Yum Pro Performance Plastics Kit Most of our experts, however, told us that they use rubber worms when bass fishing. I also use topwater poppers. IJudek says, but I find nine out of 10 times they take a rubber worm. IStuk and Hedaya told us how it is desirable to have a multi-color set of rubber worms, because, according to The Writing, when they do not strike, you throw an unexpected color and sometimes, even if you are out of aggression, this is what makes them finally bite. What you're trying to do is make them react to you. Hedaya tells us that this has long been his favorite kit to use, because it comes with 46 rubber worms of different sizes and colors. $20 at Dick's Sporting Goods Eagle Claw Baitholder Fish Hooks, Size 4, Set of 10 Because the bass are a little bigger than panfish, Hedaya says you'll want a bigger hook. He likes a size 4, and he buys his own from Dicks; I use 4 for bass just in case, although others use bigger bass hooks, so I still have a chance to catch some that are a little smaller. (Ross also recommends using a size four sooth for bass fishing.) $2 at Dick's Sporting Goods Actually good deals, smart shopping tips and exclusive discounts.
